Little Stories For Bedtime BY THORNTON W. BURGESS

No one knows how true this is better than does old Granny Fox. And no one knows better than she how to make trouble for other people by starting little untrue stories. You see she learned long ago how fast a mean little tale will travel once it has been started, and so when there is some one with whom she is afraid to fight honestly she uses these little untrue tales instead of claws and teeth, and often they hurt a great deal worse than claws or teeth ever could.

No you would think that by this than claws or teeth ever could.

No you would think that by this time all the little meadow and forest people would have found old Granny Fox out, and that they wouldn't believe her stories. But the truth is, most people are very apt to believe inpleasant things about other people without taking the trouble to find out if they are true, and old Granny Fox knows this. Besides, she is smart enough to tell these little troublemaking, untrue stories as if she had beard them from some one else. So, of course, some one else gets the blame for starting them. Oh, Granny Fox is smart and sly! Yes, siree! She certainly is smart and sly.

When Granny heard that Old Man Coyote had come to live on the Green Meadows she knew right away that he belonged to the Wolf family and so was too big and strong for her to light. But if she couldn't drive him tway with her teeth and claws perhaps she could make so much trouble for him that he would go away. She would try anyway, and all the time he would be careful to be very polite

It is to him so that he would never guess who started the trouble.

It was one of her plans to make trouble that was taking her over to see Prickly Porky the Porcupine. She found him as usual in the top of a poplar tree filling his stomach with tender young bark. Granny Fox happened to pass that way, and not as if she had come purposely. She presented to be very much surprised when she looked up and saw Prickly when she looked up and saw Prickly

"Good morning, Prickly Porky," she said in her pleasantest voice." "How big and fine and strong and brave you are looking this morning!"

Prickly Porky stopped eating and looked down at her suspiciously, but just the same he felt pleased.

"Huh!" he grunted, then once more he began to eat.

Granny Fox went right on talking.

"Billy Mink told it to me. He says that this stranger, Old Man Coyote, who has come to the Green Meadows and the Green Forest, has been boasting to give that boaster a chance to try to get his Porcupine dinner," grunted Prickly Porky. Granny turned aside to grin. "I don't believe you will find him now." said she, "but I heard that he is planning to get you when you go down to the Laughing Brook for a drink the highest tree you could find it of the highest tree you are not afraid of anybody. But other people believe it, and they do say that Old Man Coyote is bragging

CONFESSIONS OF A HUSBAND!

The Man's Side of Married Life

I Receive a Few Surprises I was in the midst of some work the next morning when I was sum-moned to the chief's office.

"I don't want to hurry your decision in any way, Mr. Howard." the latter said to me, and I remembered that when business was good he had been in the habit of calling me Tom, "but naturally I am anxious to know whether you have made up your mind to stay with us, in view of the unfortunate reduction which we have been compelled to make in your salary."

salary."

I hesitated before replying, and he put in quickly: "Don't give me an answer until you are certain. I merely wanted to remind you that various plans of ours are held up until we know what you intend to do. If anything better offers itself you would certainly be foolish not to take it, and my best wishes will go with you."

I thought it best to be absolutely frank. "I have received a tentative offer from a company in an entirely different line of business."

I explained. "The offer is rather attractive in some respects, but nothing definite has been decided one way or the other. In case I accept it I shall let you know immediatley."

That ended the interview. The chief had been very decent about the matter; though, after all, I had some demands upon him for consideration, since he and my father had been more or less business friends. However, there is a point in business beyond which friendship does not go, and I began to worry whether

What do the kreatest artists know of Phoenix? This question is answered in Musical America's guide for 1921. It gives this information. Population, 29,652; music editor. Sally Jacobs, Republican; managers who engage artists: (modesty forbids the writer's mention of the first name). Rickards and Nace, Cordeila Huiburd, Auditoriums and capacities: Elks theater, 900; high school auditorium, 1,200; Woman's club, 400; musical correspondent. Helena M. Redewill, Artists will be glad to learn in the 1921 issue that we will have the Rilato theater with 1,200 capacity and Shrine anditorium with greater general capacity besides a new armory recently voted to be constructed which may accommodate 4,000 people. John McCormack and Enrico Caruso will have no excuse for not visiting phoenix when these vocal containers are ready for service.
